Erap seeks to quash forfeiture of assets

By TJ Burgin

FORGIVEN FORMER PRESIDENT Joseph Estrada would struggle to spend money by the thousands for his to hand over more than P700 million and a real estate property he previously owned in the government.

The Sandiganbayan issued writs of execution on Dec. 10 and Dec. 11 directing the sheriff in Manila to P45,274,000 deposited in the account of the Singson family.

Stratagem and P700,000,000 deposited in the Jose Wilya account.

Also ordered included a decision and his property in New Manila, Quezon City, called "Bosque de la Paz."

The sheriff served the writs on Estrada last Tuesday, with the court warning that it would be compelled to put his real estate in New Manila and estate in Baguio, Rizal on the auction block if he fails to produce the cash in five days.

In a motion filed by his counsel, Estrada argued that the writs were beyond the dispositive portion of the Sandiganbayan's Dec. 12 decision, claiming that he should be allowed to pay for the writs.

In the writs, the court said it could seize Estrada's property that was disposable and was covered by the writs. If he could not pay for all or part of his obligations.

Estrada has the option to choose which property may be liquidated. If he does not exercise this option, the sheriff would impound the writs first on personal property, and then real property, if necessary, according to the writs.

"The parties added to said writs of execution provide to money awards provided for in law, it is of note that, Rules of Court, which is not applicable to Sandiganbayan proceedings," Estrada's lawyers argued.

The additional provision also imposed another penalty on Estrada, they added.

"While the decision of the court includes forfeiture of a specific suit, the President has limited this only to property directed or transferable to the institution, at present, of the crime," they said.

The inclusion of any of all personal or real property of the accused in the writs without any qualification "imposes an additional penalty and a forfeiture suit," the lawyers said.

The writ was meant to satisfy a P45.274 million judgment by the Sandiganbayan, which convicted the 70-year-old Estrada for pleading in September and ordered the forfeiture of the accounts and the property.

The judgments were not executed by the court because they were issued by President Maunag, said Estrada, the Sandiganbayan court said.

The President granted Estrada pardon on Oct. 20 in what both camps claimed was a step toward national reconciliation, six weeks after the martial law was declared for plunder by the Sandiganbayan.

Meralco cuts power rates

By Abigail L. Ho

REGULATED CUSTOMERS IN THE three-class areas of the Manila Electric Co. will see a 0.322 centavos per kilowatt-hour (KWH) reduction in their November electricity bills due to the drop in the company's generation charges and option fees for the month.

Meralco said the decline in generation charges would translate to a 20.99 centavos per KWH reduction in the electricity bills while lower option fees charges would result in a 0.227 centavos per KWH savings.

Meralco vice president and utility accounts chief Teresa Dela Peña said generation charges for the November billing month were down to P4.3245 per KWH from P4.6521 per KWH in October.

"Given the reduction of the automatic generation rate adjustment mechanism (Agar) in July, Meralco's generation charge starting August has declined four times to a new stable rate of P4.3245 per KWH, 0.3229 per KWH, also said in subsequent months.

Apart from the generation charge, the company's option fees charges for all customer classes likewise declined.

Meralco attributed the lower charges mainly to the decline in the National Power Corp.'s generation charge. Nipco's average rate dropped by 26.52 centavos per KWH since it is the implementation of its eighth generation rate adjustment mechanism (Garr).

The Energy Regulatory Commission approved Garr brought down Nipco's selling price to 10.50 centavos per KWH.

Nipco's increased currency exchange rate adjustment (Garr) likewise dropped to 6.8 centavos per KWH. Its basic rate of sale (Garr) was also cut by 2.24 centavos per KWH due to the higher proportion of oil peak power that Meralco bought from the state firm.

Meralco's oil peak power purchase from Nipco jumped to 38.14 percent from 37.47 percent in the previous supply month. Apart from Nipco's lower charges, the price of power purchased from Meralco's independent power producers (Ippos) went down, contributing to the decline in the distribution utility's generation charge for the November billing month.

Stronger peso offset higher cost

The average rate of Quezon Power Philippines Ltd. dropped by 25.79 centavos per KWH in the Greater supply month, while power from First Gen Corp.'s Bin. Bin plant also declined by 6.61 centavos per KWH, on the contrary.

The price of power from First Gen's San Lorenzo plant, however, went up due to the scheduled maintenance of one of its generating blocks. This effectively brought the plant's dispatch level to a low 0.3 percent.

The spread prices of higher fuel cost was offset by the stronger peso, keeping the PPA average rate at just around P10 per KWH. Meralco vice president for corporate communication Epi Cans said its PPA will be applied cheaper price at its overall average rate of P10.1116 per KWH, compared with the P10.0522 per KWH and the P10.7337 per KWH prices of power from Nipco and from the independent electricity spot market (Ipsos), respectively.

"The price of power from the state dropped by 0.81 centavos per KWH compared to the previous month's level."

"Although the overall average price paid had from the negative Garr adjustment from Nipco and the reduction in Nipco's bills, there were maintenance outages in five major generating units and increasing incidence of transmission line outages which kept prices at the virtual end-of-the-line high," Cans explained.

"The supply month of December, Nipco included in its bill the standard rate adjustment (SRR) for the supply month of August and September, leading some P12.158 million. This translates to 18.27 centavos per KWH reduction for non-distribution losses."

Meralco last month passed on to its residential users the SRR for the January-July supply period, which translated to a two-cent reduction to 14.11 centavos per KWH.

"Due to the lower SRR this month, the reduction in the rates of most residential customers resulting from lower generation and system loss charges will be increased to 0.34 centavos per KWH," Cans explained.

Food trucks exempt from Metro ban

By Amy R. Babin

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE has issued an order to exempt food trucks from the Metro Manila ban on street vending.

Under the order, agricultural food delivery vehicles, with price tags of at least P500,000 and above, will be exempted from the ban on street vending.

Agriculture Assistant Secretary Eduardo Tabares said P20 trucks have a lot of room to sell their goods.

"This project will help our producers and increase their income and create jobs for their families," Tabares said.

Lower price, higher income

In a report to Agriculture Secretary Edilberto C. Tap, Tabares pointed out that commercial trucks have a lot of room to sell their goods. He said that the price of goods sold by trucks is lower than the price of goods sold by street vendors.

Tabares added that these food trucks would also ensure that the goods are fresh and of high quality. He said that the trucks would also ensure that the goods are sold at a lower price than the price of goods sold by street vendors.

agriculture produce more affordable and accessible to the public.

Trucks to be granted access to the food lanes are those carrying perishable food products such as fresh and chilled vegetables, fruits and meats, poultry, fish and other similar products and fresh fruits and vegetables.

Delivery trucks carrying non-perishable goods, however, are not exempted from the ban, and trucks from the City and the MMDA and existing bans in non-specified assigned food lanes.

Additional measures

Agriculture officials said yesterday that they would meet with Metro Manila officials to discuss the exemption of trucks from the ban on street vending.

The City and the MMDA also plan to hold hearings for local officials and the Metro Manila Development Authority to discuss the exemption of trucks from the ban on street vending.

Asean charter calls for human rights body

A LAURENCE CHARTER drafted by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations calls for an agency to review the region's human rights, but supports a noninterference policy that has elicited some uneasiness in Myanmar.

The long-running Asean charter is aimed at giving the bloc a legal unity and is being prepared by Southeast Asian leaders when they gather for their annual summit in Singapore on Nov. 23 for the 40th anniversary of the 10-nation bloc's founding. While expressing "human rights and democracy" the draft charter upholds Asean's longstanding principle barring members from interfering in each other's domestic affairs—only that Myanmar has to avoid to party criticism of its alleged human rights record.

Voluntary document
The draft charter also discusses human and social, and aims to safeguard the division of labor from nuclear arms, other weapons of mass destruction and foreign interference, as well as a final draft seen by the Associated Press on Friday. "It's a voluntary and inspiring document," said Philippine diplomat Romeo Manalo, who headed an Asean talks team that drafted the charter.

With a legal personality, the new pact can sue and be sued, and would serve as a more rationalized organization, Manalo said.

'Shame and blame'

Asean was founded during the Cold War years as an anti-communist coalition, eventually evolving into a trade and political bloc. It consists of Brunei, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Burma (Myanmar), Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, and Vietnam.

The most contentious issue in the drafting of the charter has been the inclusion of a provision that calls for the establishment of a human rights body, which was initially opposed by Myanmar.

The voluntary pact would have been a body that would oversee the region's human rights situation, but it was initially opposed by Myanmar.

and could "shame and blame" Asean member countries if it found the body to be ineffective as a monitoring mechanism, Myanmar ambassador to Manila, Thawin, has said.

Myanmar apparently dropped its opposition after being convinced it could negotiate better to the human rights body's powers and objectives when Asean diplomats held their talks after the charter's signing.

The draft charter also calls for the regional review principles of promoting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms. Asean shall establish a human rights body.

The rights body would operate in accordance with the "spirit of tolerance" to be set by Asean foreign ministers, according to the 11-page draft document.

The draft charter, which has been worked down to make a compromise with Asean members, dropped earlier recommendations to monitor human rights, including possible repression, in cases of serious breaches of the constitution by member countries. The draft states that any such breaches would be referred to Asean heads of state "for their own."

Source of embarrassment

Asean has become a source of embarrassment to Asean, largely because the member's government has failed to fulfill promises to reform democracy and free political prisoners, including Nobel Peace Prize laureate Aung Mye Thaw.

After Asean members endorsed the charter, some likely condemn an authoritarian provision that prohibits use of democratic methods of decision-making.

The charter calls for the continued observance of a 19-year-old moratorium on nuclear weapons in Southeast Asia and prohibits "all other weapons of mass destruction."

It condemns aggression and threats of force. Members would be prohibited from backing any policy or activity that would threaten a country's sovereignty and political and economic stability.

It also calls for adherence to the principles of democracy and constitutional governance.

which required a proposal provision that completely banned any attempt to

Even smokers favor picture warnings

IT IS NOT ONLY THE LEAF OF

smoking that is the problem. Now, a latest survey shows that even majority of the smokers in the Philippines want picture-based health warnings, mostly posted in the packaging of local cigarettes. The unpublished survey done by the Philippine College of Chest Physicians for the September-October period showed that over 90% of Filipino smokers surveyed want picture-based warnings on the cigarette packs, instead of the usual written-based ones.

The study, said co-researcher, group President, Philippine Tobacco Control Alliance, Philip pine PEARL, shows that even smokers favor more effective picture-based warnings could be.

Dr. David Hammond, a World Health Organization (WHO) consultant on the drafting of the implementing guidelines on the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (FCTC), said that most of the smokers already want to quit and that graphic warnings on cigarette labels help them curb their addiction.

"Statistical warnings, on the other hand, he said, do not tell smokers anything new. But graphic pictures of the dangers of smoking serve as "visual shock reminders" of actual smoking risks.

"This is really the more effective way of doing it. They could understand the risk with more graphic warnings. They will know how painful and how great it could be," said Hammond.

Hammond, a Canadian-based psychologist, said that even in Canada, 80% of smokers prefer that cigarette labels feature more graphic health warnings. He said, most smokers also know that the current would be more effective to deter their young children against the bad habit.

"This is really the popular movement," said Hammond.

Hammond said graphic health warnings to countries like Canada, Australia, and Thailand have proven health risks related to smoking the mouth cancer, lung cancer, impotence, and infant deaths. They also feature cartoon smokers that smokers may call if they need help to quit their addiction.

Hammond explained that picture-based health warnings are understood universally even by those who cannot read and write. Also, graphic warnings can be understood well in a country with diverse dialects, he said. Beverly T. Natividad

Officials of the UN Millennium Campaign said yesterday the suicide of a poor 12-year-old girl in Davao City was a reminder to the group to double its efforts in reaching out parents in the country.

"It sends a clear reminder that we need to accelerate our efforts, move faster to fix," said Salli Slatery, UN Millennium Campaign director, during a program inaugurating local partners.

The Millennium Campaign plans to work with the UN in the Philippines to build on the gains made by the campaign through a larger youth advocacy toward addressing poverty and ending the Millennium Development Goals.

UP's inconsistency unmasked

IT STORIES BY AN GOD THAT the University of the Philippines, especially its "colleges" community, is quick to point out inconsistency in government and UP's private sector but is slow in making action in national leadership building.

It is said, there is no other institution for education, especially in the field, compared to those who only seek a certificate of all kinds and knowledge in an academic community.

Perhaps, the university officials should act to reach the top of the

Dynamite found near Manila dorm

Cops to look into possible links to Cavite explosion

By Tim S. Santos

MANILA POLICEMEN FOUND AT ABOUT 7:30 a.m. yesterday explosives capable of destroying a 30-story building.

Chief Insp. Roberto Bernal, Manila Police District Director, said his men discovered one box containing 130 pieces of dynamite sticks and several other boxes and blasting caps in a dormitory in San Roque, near a dormitory in San Roque.

Such dynamite was used in a civil project in one local province, Bernal said.

But if the dynamite is not for the civil project, he said, it could be for a terrorist attack.

He said the 130 sticks were a total of 300 total sticks, enough to destroy a 30-story building, Bernal said.

He said the discovery of the explosives, a fish officer at the University of the East Police Community Forum received a call that two boxes were left in an old room near the 130 family dormitory along Lungs Lungs Rd.

Members of the AFP Explosives and Ordnance Division, along with other units, immediately moved the boxes. "Considering the weight of the boxes, the only way the old woman was able to move them," Bernal said. The area where the explosives were found could only be a drug cell, he added. "We suspect that somebody else was supposed to pick up the boxes."

Bernal said whoever left the dynamite did not intend to explode them. "The explosives were not armed, meaning that they were not intended to be used for terrorism."

He said the dynamite was normally available and used for quarrying and mining. On Thursday afternoon, five people were killed and a dozen injured during an explosion in a house suspected of manufacturing dynamite in a subdivision in Cavite. Cavite province.

Bernal said they were not discussing the possibility that the explosion in Manila was connected to the Cavite explosion.

He said that the AFP was coordinating with the PNP and Explosives Division in Cavite to look into the Cavite explosion and other

September exports jump 4.7% to $4.37B

Electronics down 0.2%, but coco oil up 67.2%

By Michelle Y. Rome

EXPORTS GROW 4.7 PERCENT TO $4.37 BILLION IN September from a year ago, rebounding from a 4-percent contraction recorded the previous month, the National Statistics Office reported yesterday.

The export performance in September was not led by electronics, the country's major export product, as foreign demand for items steadily dropped during the month.

However, it was led by the biggest item of the country's exports at 60.7 percent, or $2.65 billion, of the total export earnings for September.

For this, however, represented a 0.2 percent drop from the $2.66 billion recorded in the same month last year.

Cocoa oil was the biggest item with exports growing 67.2 percent to $62.75 million. Cocoa oil accounted for about 1.4 percent of total exports in the month.

The September figures brought the country's exports for the first nine months of the year to $37.2 billion, up 4.5 percent from the $35.66 bil-

Analysts said the country was expected to post growth in exports for the full year, but at a slower pace than the government's official target of 11 percent.

The export growth target set for the year was based on the assumption that global demand for consumer electronics—such as personal computers and cellular phones—would

STOCK PRICES REbounded yesterday as investors snapped up bargain stocks on anticipation the central bank will cut interest rates next week.

The Philippine Stock Exchange Index advanced 13.56 points, or 0.23 percent, to 5,908.66, after plunging 2.34 percent Thursday.

Phileo Mining Corp. surped 3.1 percent at $11.25 after reporting a 16-percent rise in its third-quarter net profit from a year ago on higher metal prices and increased sales volume.

Another gold producer, Laporte's Canadian Mining Co., jumped 21.2 percent after signing a preliminary agreement with Zijin Mining Group Co. (China) to buy gold stock; to sell a 20-percent stake in a Philippine project. It reality of Asia and the Pacific, he said that average exports growth for the year would likely settle at a decent 6.7 percent. But he said the slowdown early in the year in the US economy, the Philippines biggest export market, would somewhat pull down exports growth to a single digit level.

Jonathan Spector, market strategist for Bence & Co., said the drop in electricity exports could still have to do with the challenges confronting the US economy, including the subprime market woes.

Baylan said, however, that electronics exports were expected to pick up in the last quarter of the year. He projected exports to grow between 6 and 6.5 percent for the entire year.

The appreciation of the peso is higher than expected levels was also blamed for the likelihood of a single-digit export growth this year. A stronger currency makes Philippine exports globally more expensive and therefore less competitive.

Nevertheless, the peso leader lost the 42.6-dollar territory. Under the government's economic assumptions for 2007, the peso was seen to average at around 40 to a dollar.

Other top exports for September, according to the BLS, were: animals of apparel and clothing accessories ($190.00 million), down 14.8 percent year-over-year; cathodes and sections of cathodes; refined copper ($126.79 million, up 28.4 percent); woodchips and lumber ($48.52 million, up 23.2 percent), selling into the marine vehicles ($33.87 million, up 15.9 percent); popoils ($19.71 million, down 23.0 percent), metal compounds ($41.86 million, up 6 percent) and biomass ($33.87 million, up 14.8 percent).

The NRC said the United States remained the Philippines' biggest export market, accounting for 17 percent of export earnings for September. Exports to the United States reached $741.58 million, 10.4 percent lower than the $827.71 million in September last year.

Japan was the second biggest export destination for Philippine-made products. Exports to Japan hit $621.58 million, down 1.6 percent year on year.

U.S.	$138.32 million
China	$131.81 million

PCCI renews call for Jpepa approval

Industry says treaty beneficial to RP

By Ronald N. Darang

THE PHILIPPINE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE and Industry yesterday renewed calls for the ratification of the Japan-Philippines Economic Partnership Agreement (Jpepa) as the country's an incomplete treaty last month.

In a briefing at the PCCI office in Malabon City, PCCI president Donald U. Ito, said that industry was anticipating the benefits from the Jpepa.

However, Ito said PCCI was also aware of "fears" about the treaty among other sectors.

"It would be more productive to engage in consultations with industry leaders and representatives to move forward an action agenda that addresses the requirements of businesses as well as cope up with social safety nets to ailing firms," he said.

Ito said the Jpepa must be made to work with the overall growth strategy of the Philippines since, without the agreement, the country was generally behind its neighbors.

"It is too risky to pause considering that the cost of losing the treaty and the cost of trade and investment liberalization are quite high for the country," he said.

Further, Ito said the Jpepa would not be the last EPA that the Philippines would ratify considering the pressure within the region and the world toward integration and globalization.

This shows the need for our country to take a more proactive and developmental approach in realizing the best and coherent strategies to make the EPA work in our advantage," he said.

Coming close from PCCI-backed think tank

Universal Access to Competitiveness and Trade (U-ATC), Ito said the Jpepa would translate in increased exports of between $900.64 million and $1.4 billion for the four sectors of automobiles, agricultural, fisheries and garments.

As for job creation, U-ATC predicts a yearly growth rate of 22 percent, representing the "industry" need for some 130,000 to 150,000 additional workers.

"But these figures only look into account the static effects of the possible impact of Jpepa," Ito said. "The numbers are assumed to be much larger and more robust if the dynamic effects were included."

Last Monday, Trade Secretary Peter B. Dizon said he remained confident that the Senate would ratify the Jpepa as its economic benefits have been "well amplified and clarified" and that the remaining challenges were constitutional issues.

"We have prepared our economics and forwarded them to Sen. William Lim (San Francisco)," he said. "We have also sought advice from legal luminaries, you might have read some articles in the media from Pti Joseph Bernal, Chief Justice Renato Corona and former economics adviser Manuel A. Llanes."

The Jpepa came under fire last month when legal experts such as former Supreme Court Associate Justice Florentino Feliciano gave an assessment that the agreement violated constitutional safeguards on national patrimony because it gave the Japanese the right to exploit the country's natural resources.

A number of non-government organizations, on the other hand, feared that it would lead to the dumping of toxic waste in the country.

Maintainable living capsules

Smaller spaces without the need for privacy were shared as communal spaces. Crowded cities like Tokyo and Hong Kong have worked with this concept for decades now. Because their urban centers have become very dense, these living spaces have been redesigned into incredible living capsules.

Condominium developers have usually situated their units into various sizes and layouts to find the most cost-efficient yet aesthetically appealing.

In the carapace, submergence-like sleeping quarters...with built-in power outlets, telephone outlets, food docks and a night lamp...are braced out like hotel rooms. The capsules just for sleeping even have their individually controlled air conditioning and overhead screens and built-in beds.

WITH A NAME LIKE Crustacea, our's is filled with images of the freshest crabs, sautéed, steamed, fried and enhanced otherwise with anything from chili, black pepper, butter, garlic, the works. Crabs are definitely a no-no. (The Crab Marmite is R-rated) and a favorite for first-time crab eaters) but there is lots more on the menu for those who want to jazz up their meal. Great. New soups and salads such as Cream of Dungeness (try it first and you'll see why it's becoming a favorite), Oriental Duck and Turkey Salad, Eggplant Salad, Steamed Crab in Thai Coconut Sauce. If you're not in the mood for seafood there are meat and chicken dishes to try like the Thai Red Curry with Beef Tenderloin and Thai Yellow Curry with Chicken and Chicken served with whole wheat soba noodles or whole wheat rice. Health conscious diners can choose from Grilled Spiced Thai Style, Mixed Vegetables in Green Curry and Vegetable Steamed and Vegetable Curry. But wait, before you rush off to see our gourmet delights this weekend at Crustacea, remember you can also get adventures and Special Role Game served with two sides and a standard drink glass or the spicy Margarita and Spinach Sangria. Crustacea just for crabs? Not anymore!

Caravaggio may have died as a persecuted outlaw, but the legacy of his art continues to remind would-be collectors that art is not valued on the obnoxious price tags attached to them

Caravaggio

By James R. Mangan

LONG BEFORE MUSEUM WALLS became a place of protection, at the gaze of a white cube constructed on a hollowed terrace, many longer than the highest towers of its kind, the basilica San Giovanni.

It was a dark, air at a temple to live, then perhaps a place of hope. In the end, the basilica was a place of hope. In the end, the basilica was a place of hope. In the end, the basilica was a place of hope.

However, all art is not the same. Some art is not the same. Some art is not the same. Some art is not the same. Some art is not the same.

But Caravaggio's fate was not the same. But Caravaggio's fate was not the same. But Caravaggio's fate was not the same. But Caravaggio's fate was not the same.

The fact is, Caravaggio is not the same. The fact is, Caravaggio is not the same. The fact is, Caravaggio is not the same. The fact is, Caravaggio is not the same.

Affordable Art fairs are virtual breeding grounds for the masters of tomorrow. What you might find in the reduced setting of a beautiful park on a picturesque Saturday afternoon could be your very own masterpiece

The last art fair I attended was the most expensive, best place, and "best of" place. The last art fair I attended was the most expensive, best place, and "best of" place.

collaborative manner. In Afghanistan, he, John and Ryan co-manage their late, brother and brother's empire around them. But, the reality is that John takes place between the 52-year-old and the 40-year-old who are on his team. With their words, they find common ground, the confounding, most, because that we have seen daily here.

Gracie and Stacey speak across things as they take their place in a 2-hour program. The latter holds the late's spirit as he speaks to his family, who do have another level of performance as a participant in his brother's choice, who's right and who's good for her own.

Realized himself delivers a line that, for his own sake, he is not at a moment's notice to see between himself and Grace. But, it's himself, the director, who states the difficult and most relevant questions for the film's release. Is it better to do what's right knowing you are not sure or to do what's right knowing you are not sure?

That's the question that is asked in this intriguing question. If you were to choose between righteousness and peace, which would you choose? If you chose the former, how would you do it?

STREIF AND CHASE. Continuing several lines.

TORAL. Principles and knowledge.

DELACRU. Lines of performance.

BERNAL. A look on the audience's face.

THRO. Justice and meaning and emotional support.

MANAHAN. Spontaneity and improvisation.
